Projects

- A fear of unknown: A psychoanalytic study of Josh Malerman's Bird Box
This study offers a psychoanalytic reading of Bird Box by Josh Malerman, interpreting the novel's horror elements as symbolic representations of repressed trauma and unconscious fears. Drawing on Freud's concepts of repression and the Death Drive (Thanatos), the analysis explores how the unseen creatures reflect internal psychological threats rather than external dangers. Key symbols such as blindfolds and emotional detachment are examined as defense mechanisms. The study concludes that Bird Box is not merely a survival narrative, but an allegory of the human mind's struggle with fear, repression, and emotional healing.
